Tips before you sell

- Check with the Swedish Tax Agency about your opportunities for deductions of the premiums on the insurances.

Survey - for your home and yourself

- When you sell your home, it is a good idea to carry out a survey/ inspection. It is an ocular building technical examination which provides a basis for assessing the condition of the property.
- When you buy a new home, you have an obligation to survey the object, and for property this it is particularly far-reaching. It is you, as a buyer, that have to prove that a defect exists.
- Life and law are more intertwined than you might think. Via e.g. Familjens Jurist you could quickly find out how to prevent problems for you and your loved ones if something unwanted would happen. Read more about life survey at: www.livspusslet.se/behovsanalys

We stand by your side if a fault is discovered

We know that when selling your property or co-operative apartment it is important for you to be able to move on and focus fully on your new home and next steps in life. That is why we have been working committedly for over 20 years with insurance solutions that provides exactly that, and that actually makes a difference.

What a fault is and how it can affect you when selling

Hidden faults and faults in co-operative apartments can include for example pests, mold damages and faulty constructions. If a fault is discovered you could be held liable to compensate the new owner at great expense.

The reason is that when selling a property, according to the Land Code, you are liable for any hidden faults found in the house from the day that the new owner receives the rights of access. The liability then stretches for a period of ten years. When selling a co-operative apartment the liability for faults stretches over two years, based on the Sale of Goods act. Neither of these are usually included in the coverage on your regular home insurance.

UPPDAGA – brings safety for both the seller and buyer

When selling your home it can feel comforting to know that the responsibility for handling any potential future claims will be taken care of. A hidden fault insurance and insurance for faults in co-operative apartments provides for this eventuality. The insurance company will then take care of any claims that the buyer makes against you, investigates the claim and whether it is covered by the insurance, and pays any litigation costs. If it turns out that the claim is considered to constitute a fault, the insurance company can pay compensation to the buyer in order to rectify the fault.

¹ Uppdaga Mest covers the primary house and additional buildings which have been inspected by a surveyor that has been approved by Gjensidige. Contact WTW for information on approved surveyors.

² The installations must be performed in accordance with prevailing rules, regulations and legal practices. Deviations can partly or fully reduce compensation.

³ Risk constructions is a construction commonly known to imply a higher risk for severe damages. Damages as a result of risk construction are not classified as hidden faults nor included under the rules of the Land Code. Uppdaga Mest compensates for damages in risk constructions if an independent inspection has been conducted by a certified surveyor and the inspection did not reveal moisture or other indications of damage.
